Modern conceptual change strategies will be integrated through demonstration and commentary. 9:45 a.m. - 10:00 a.m. Q&amp;A Session 10:00 a.m. - 10:30 a.m. Beverage Break 10:30 a.m. - 12:15 p.m. Developments in Understanding the Biology of the Body and Brain in Pelvic Pain  This lecture will present the contemporary understanding of motor control of the lumbopelvic region, the interaction between lumbopelvic control, breathing and continence/pelvic organ support, and changes in this system when men and women have pain. The underlying mechanisms will be discussed to provide a foundation for tailoring treatment to the needs of individual patients. 12:15 p.m. - 12:30 p.m. Q&amp;A Session 12:30 p.m. - 1:30 p.m. Lunch On Own 1:30 p.m. - 2:30 p.m. New Ways to Assess Neuromuscular Control in Pelvic Pain  This session will present new methods to assess motor control of the lumbo-pelvic region. This will include novel methods to assess pelvic floor muscle activity using ultrasound imaging. Recent research and clinical work has developed new techniques to evaluate function in men and refined techniques in women. These methods provide an unrivalled opportunity to assess the interaction between individual pelvic floor muscles and have been validated these to aid tailoring of intervention to individual patients. New techniques to assess and interpret pelvic floor muscle function in men and women will be demonstrated. Assessments will also be presented for interaction between pelvic/abdominal muscle activity, interaction between pelvic control and breathing, influence of posture/alignment on pelvic and trunk muscle activity. Interpretation for treatment planning will be discussed. 2:30 p.m. - 2:45 p.m. Q&amp;A Session 2:45 p.m. - 3:00 p.m. Quick Break 3:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m. Integration of The Protectometer with Biopsychosocial Assessment and Care  This session will focus on The Protectometer, from its theoretical rationale, recent evidence from people with pelvic and non-pelvic pain, its integration with contemporary biopsychosocial assessment, explaining pain, neuromuscular control and rehabilitation. Emphasis will be placed on choosing words carefully and on the objective of giving patients the skills to master their own situation and gain resilience for future exposure. 4:00 p.m. - 4:15 p.m. Q&amp;A Session 4:15 p.m. - 4:30 p.m. Wrap Up
